Thomas Hardy was apprenticed to an architect in London at the age of 16 and he worked under him for 5 years. His office was next to the school kept by William Barnes who encouraged Hardy's love for Literature. At 30, he published his first novel. It was followed by 15 others in 25 years.

Hardy turned to poetry after 1886 when his controversial novel "Jude the Obscure" was accorded a hostile reception for its frank consideration of sexual themes. His first book of Poetry came out when he was 58. Seven others followed concluding with "Winter Words" which came out posthumously in the year of his death at the age of 87 in 1928. Test - 15 Read the following description about a trained carpenter who works for a construction company in Germany and answer the following questions.

My home is near the city of Split in Yugoslavia. My wife and children live there. I go to see them about three or four times a year. It takes me about twenty hours to drive there. It's awful being away from your family for most of the year. But I didn't want to uproot them and bring them here, unlike many of my Yugoslavian colleagues, who have bought houses here and settled down. I have to stay here to earn enough money to pay for my children's education.

I am living and working here as a temporary arrangement. But I have been here for fifteen years now. I don't know when I'll have enough money to return home for good. At present, about 4.6 million foreigners are living in West Germany. This country started importing foreign labour in the 1960s. The economy was booming then. Like me, most people came here with short work permits and visas. Later they were extended. About one-third of the foreign workers have been here for over ten years.

The first few years were very difficult. I couldn't speak the language and so many things were different. It took me six years to learn German. Outside work, I don't mix much with Germans. I spend my spare time with my Yugoslavian friends. Some of us live in little huts on the edge of the building site where we are working. It saves on rent and we don't have to commute through rush-hour traffic. But it is a little boring at weekends.

This construction company is in the Ruhr Valley. This is the largest industrial area in the whole of Europe. But the building industry has been hit hard by the recession. About 2,800 companies went bankrupt in 1982. So there is less work now.

01. Underline the most suitable phrase,
